Overview

Camp Code: SUN260117WO

Where the land meets the sea at the southern tip of West Bengal lies the Indian Sunderbans, a stretch of impenetrable mangrove forest of great size and biodiversity. A UNESCO World Heritage Site (awarded in 1997), the Sunderbans is a vast area covering 4264 square kms in India alone, with a larger portion in Bangladesh.

The Sunderbans are a part of the world's largest delta formed by the rivers Ganges, Brahmaputra and Meghna. Situated on the lower end of the Gangetic West Bengal, it is also the world's largest estuarine forest. 70% of the area is under saline water and the area is criss-crossed by hundreds of creeks and tributaries.

Sunderbans is the home of Tigers, Fishing Cat, Chital, Clawless Otter, Crab-eating Mongoose, Estuarine Crocodiles, Water Monitor, Gangetic Dolphins and snakes. The dark and foreboding attractiveness of the mangroves also hides some of the most sought after birds and animals in the world and a chance encounter with a Swamp Partridge, a Brown-winged Kingfisher, a Grey Headed Lapwing, a Pallas's Fish Eagle, a Lesser Adjutant or maybe a Mangrove Whistler is always a possibility as is the unforgettable sight of the most secretive great cat in the world.
